CuteLab Monthly

with
Max Ardito

Salutations

Lactic fermentation is the only thing on my mind this November. Hoping that the jars in my room filled with rotting shit are ready in time for thanksgiving so that I can give all my friends botulism.

Did I mention we have a new module out?

--- M.A.
P.S. Missing home...

Introducing: Mom Jeans

Mom Jeans is a digital Voltage-Controlled Oscillator (VCO) that blends pulsar synthesis with grain-width modulation. The module generates a train of regularly spaced harmonic grains while varying the width of these grains in a precise and pitch-related way. In hybridizing these two techniques, Mom Jeans opens up a surprisingly varied range of timbres, given a concise set of adjustable parameters.

Fermentation Corner!

Lactic Tomatoes

Diary entry 11/01 :: The first time I burped this jar it spat tomato juice five feet across my apartment. It's a bit less explosive ten days later, but I'm still afraid nonetheless.

Lactic Berries

Diary entry 11/03 :: Burping this jar definitely gave off the sweetest and chillest smell of them all... It's kind of foamy at the top. Like seafoam. From a sea of fruit rollups...

Lactic Shoyu Mushrooms

Diary entry 11/10 :: Hmmm, one shroom floated to the top and now the jar smells like rubber. Or maybe it always smelled like that?
